By Horace G Jackson

Dog Ear Publishing, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Fact not fiction - The Untold Story of One Man and World War 2 is the actual memories of a man from a six-cow dairy farm in Missouri who survived. The printed words bring to life the thoughts, the hopes, the prayers, and the fears and dramatize the personal relationships with shipmates from around the world of one young sailor in a very big war. Leaving a young wife and new son in Texas to journey to St.Petersburg Florida, New Orleans, New York City, Panama, the South Pacific war zone, then back home to San Antonio. One man cannot win a war. He can only pray he survives -give it his best effort and hope the home fires will be burning when he comes marching home. Horace G. Jackson Horace G. Jackson(88) kept a daily log during the war recording his daily events as unfolded enabling this story to be told. That was over sixty years ago. He and Theresa had six children. He has traveled from Atlanta to Alaska; always with a gold pan ready...
