I confess, says he in one of his curious Greek Prefaces, that I love and greatly value Demosthenes, both, as having been my master - for from him I learned, not indeed his eloquence, my natural capacity being too narrow to receive a thing of so great magnitude, but at least after a certain fashion the Grecian idiom -, and also as having imparted some smallest portion of his own glory to the name of Wolf, - for nowhere, as I think, will Demosthenes be read in the Latin tongue, where some who are equitable and delight not in wanton abuse, will not remember that Wolf was the first, who in addition to the Attic gown clothed Demosthenes with the Roman toga. There is something at once noble and affecting in this devotion, by which the spirit finds its incitement and consolation in the work to which it feels called, and is able to bear the present neglect, contumely, and obscurity, sustained by the conviction that it is identified, however humbly, with the work itself, in whose endurance it cherishes an unshaken faith.
