Excerpt: . . . 8 Police Body Armor Standards and Testing-Volume II: Appendicethe backing material (as required) to avoid any Marking and Workmanship overlap of depressions. The 0101. 01 standard again required that armor To be a fair hit for the purpose of measuring be free of specified evidence of inferior workman-deformation, a bullet had to be within the allowable ship. The labeling requirements were enhanced to velocity bounds-for measuring deformation, no include size, type (according to the standard itself), clause (analogous to the clause counting overspeed month and year of manufacture, cleaning instruc-bullets as fair tests if they did not penetrate) allowed tions, and strike face. (The strike face is the side of overspeed bullets to be considered fair if they did not the armor panel intended to be hit by the bullets.) create a disqualifying deformation. Penetration The 0101. 01 standard eliminated the witness plate Origin and Rationale of the 44-mm BFS Limit and required use of clay backing for penetration Considerable confusion and controversy surround testing, relying on examination o f t h e b a c k i n g the genesis of the 44 mm backface signature (BFS) material and the armor itself to determine whether a limit, in part because the rationale for it was never penetration has occurred. The introduction of upper is documented. There a rationale for...
